MvVO ART Brings Contemporary Women Artists to the New York Stock Exchange

Founder Maria van Vlodrop Rings the NYSE Closing Bell for Women’s History Month as Artwork by Fourteen Women Artists Appears Across the NYSE Trading Floor Screens and Global Broadcasts

New York, NY — March 3, 2026

During Women’s History Month, the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) invited MvVO ART to bring contemporary art to the NYSE trading floor. MvVO ART founder Maria van Vlodrop rang the NYSE Closing Bell alongside fourteen women artists from the MvVO ART community.

Artwork by the participating artists appeared across NYSE media platforms, including the monumental digital screens on the trading floor and global financial broadcasts such as CNBC’s Closing Bell and the NYSE’s Taking Stock program, transforming the New York Stock Exchange into an unexpected showcase for contemporary women artists.

The moment reflects MvVO ART's mission to connect people through art and to create new opportunities for contemporary artists to be seen through partnerships with major cultural, media, and business institutions.
